LITERATURE SURVEY

Existing problem

One of the existing problems related to the project "Portfolio" is the saturation of online portfolios in the professional world. As more individuals create and share their portfolios online, it becomes challenging to stand out and make a lasting impression on potential employers, clients, or collaborators.

Additionally, designing a visually appealing and user-friendly portfolio can be a challenge, especially for individuals with limited design skills or technical knowledge. It might be difficult to strike the right balance between creativity and professionalism, leading to either a bland and forgettable portfolio or an overly flashy one that fails to convey the intended message effectively.

Proposed solution

To address the existing problems and create an effective "Portfolio" project, I would suggest the following methods and solutions:

- Unique Value Proposition: Focus on defining a clear and unique value proposition for the portfolio. Identify and highlight the specific skills, experiences, or projects that set you apart from others. This will help differentiate your portfolio from the saturated pool of online portfolios and make it more memorable to potential viewers.
- Visual and User Experience Design: Invest time and effort in creating a visually appealing and user-friendly design for the portfolio. If design skills are limited, consider using templates or seeking help from professional designers. Ensure the layout is intuitive, the color scheme is harmonious, and the typography is legible. Strive for a balance between creativity and professionalism to make a lasting impact.
- Regular Updates: Make it a habit to update the portfolio regularly. Set a schedule to review and refresh the content, adding new projects, achievements, or certifications as they are accomplished. Regular updates demonstrate growth and progress, which can be appealing to viewers.
